ColourFest! HALIBURTON VILLAGE 2010

Sat. October 2

By Courtney Griffin

Saturday October 2 from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., Haliburton will be bursting with fall activities for the entire family as ColourFest will be underway. This event will have a "See the Colours" bus ride up to Skyline Park, a Vintage Car display, continuous entertainment, kids' colour splash, ColourFest corn roast, and a giant pumpkin and watermelon weighing contest.

ColourFest isn't actually a new concept to Haliburton, but a new-and-improved version of the "Fall Festival" put on by the BIA. This is the third year of the Fall celebrations, and it is sure to be the best yet. Jerelyn Craden, coordinator and promoter of ColourFest, has been hired through funding provided by Haliburton County Development Corporation and is leaving no stone unturned in her efforts to make the event a success.

"We're very excited about it; this is the first year the BIA has been able to hire someone to create, build and promote [ColourFest]," said Craden. She also said that it's great to "have something enticing in the name of the event...I'm thrilled to be able to do this for the Haliburton Community."

Come Fall In Love With... Fall

Heading into Fall in a fashionable manner, Haliburton will come to life with beautiful displays of scarecrows, cornstalks and hay bales on the weekend of September 17th and 18th. Roxanne Casey, of Canoe FM, is organizing the Scarecrow Contest and promoting it over Canoe radio.

As another creative way of promoting this upcoming community event, some volunteers from the ColourFest Committee have "created a spectacular float for the Rotary parade which won the 'Best of Parade' award. We won $100 and a lovely plaque," explained Craden. The main focus of entering the parade was to raise awareness about this Fall event, and to coax cottagers to return in the Fall.

"Bob Park, chair of the BIA, has been very hands-on, supportive, and is very excited about this event and the future of ColourFest," Craden said. "Our goal for Fall, which is presently a shoulder season for Haliburton businesses, is to turn it into a major season. Our plan is to build ColourFest into a major annual event for the County."

This event owes a lot to local businesses and community volunteers, including the HCDC, Parker and Printing, Canoe FM, the Moose FM, as well as many individuals. A pancake breakfast, running from 8:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m., is sure to set everyone's day off with a bang, and get attendees psyched for the day ahead. Come out to ColourFest on October 2nd for some free family entertainment and fun. □

MASONI Ch.I.P. ONTARIO

By Courtney Griffin

The Masonic Lodge in Haliburton will be hosting a Child Identification Program on Saturday September 18th from 9:30 to 3:00pm. This program was developed in 2007 with the interest of protecting children and assisting parents.

The whole program will take parents and children only 15 minutes to complete, and can provide an incredibly useful tool for parents and police should a child go missing. The Program collects basic information about the children, such as height, weight, eye colour, and birth date. Other information sources collected are digital fingerprints, digital photographs, a digital video and a dental bite impression.

In the information package released about the MasoniCh.I.P. Program, it reads, "The parent not only receives a printed form, they also receive a CD with all their child's information on it. This allows the parent the opportunity to reprint the EZ Child ID from home if they desire. To help protect identity theft, the software was written so that no information from the child is saved on the computer."

Masons Helping You Protect The Ones You Love

This identification program CD can be given to police who will insert it into their system. The system will then read the CD and send out an Amber Alert within 42 seconds. According to the media release about this program, 55 children in Ontario go missing each and every day. As terrible as that idea is, it is a reality society must face; the MasoniCh.I.P. Program can surely help identify missing children.

The procedure that the children go through in order to be documented is very non-intrusive. The Masons encourage parents to come to the event prepared with the important information about their children: an emergency contact name, address and phone number, distinguishing marks and scars, allergies, medications and the child's height and weight.

Treasurer for the Haliburton Masonic Lodge, Roger Hillier, explained that "it's all recorded so [the police] have an idea of what this child does, how they act, and how they speak." These factors are all distinguishing features of a child, and can be extremely helpful in the identification of a missing child.

The MasoniCh.I.P. Child Identification Program will be at the Haliburton Masonic Lodge on September 18th 2010, and will be providing this service free of charge for all children. □

Algonquin Green: Where Dreams Begin

"It doesn't take much to be green..."

By Courtney Griffin

As everyone knows, unless they've been living in a cave for the past twenty years, going green has become a huge priority in society. Karen Gustafson has begun a business which has paired with Confederation Log Homes to provide expertise and materials to build energy-efficient log homes and cottages.

Gustafson has been in the Carpentry trade since her apprenticeship at George Brown in 1982, and successful in a number of endeavours. Working in Toronto as a carpenter, and owning her own business called Karen Carpenter from 1982-1990, Gustafson has always been interesting in the green aspect of home-building.

"I used to cottage in Dorset," said Gustafson, "and then I just couldn't go home anymore. So, I came up here to build log homes which I have always wanted to do. I grew up in a log home...I used to tell the guys in carpentry class that I'd be building logs homes, and now I'm really doing it."

When she first moved to the Haliburton area in 1990, Gustafson sold Viceroy home packages, totalling 113 in just 10 years. After that, Gustafson worked as a home inspector before finally achieving her dream this

July when she began her business -- Algonquin Green.

Gustafson works out of a home office, where her customers can contact her. She will then come to the lot or property in question and begin her magic. "I have to give them an idea of what would work," she explained. "Every property is different and there is a lot of rock in Haliburton County. I give them an idea of what kind of building would fit without costing a lot of money."

Giving a basic idea of how her company works, Gustafson said, "It's a matter of helping people figure out a size [of building] and pricing it so it works for people, then having contractors come in and put it up." Confederation Log Homes provides the materials for the structure of the house, while Karen Gustafson gives the expertise as to how things will work.

"I've learned over the years that a lot of people can do things for themselves, so many have the shell of the house put up, and then they putter away and finish [the inside] themselves." Keeping up with the title of her business, Gustafson said, "It starts with an energy efficient design. My ideas are going back to the basics and keeping it simple."

Confederation Log Homes is the manufacturer of the first log home in Canada to achieve Energy Star rating. This energy star is an indication to customers that they are a part of a select few companies that create the most energy-efficient homes. The star means that Confederation Log Homes are roughly 30 percent more efficient than those that meet provincial standards.

In addition to creating energy-efficient homes, Confederation Log Homes offers a 50-year guarantee on their homes, and all homes are built with Canadian white-pine. For those people who have always wanted to have a log house but don't know where to start, don't fret! Education seminars are available and include information about designing, choosing a contractor, financing options, construction details, a factory tour and a model home tour. Another great thing about Confederation is that they can create a total virtual design to help walk customers through the layout of their new home.

Gustafson will take clients to a model home tour in Bobcaygeon, as well as a factory there. Providing customers with a wonderful experience is part of Gustafson's goal, as she said, "I know a lot of people and have a lot of contacts; I base my work on my reputation." Having an outstanding reputation is of utmost importance to many business owners in Haliburton County.

Creating green, energy-efficient homes is Karen Gustafson's specialty, and she will do everything in her power to help customers achieve their dreams.

Your "Anywhere, Anytime" Local Electrician

By Courtney Griffin

In the trade since his apprenticeship began in 1980, Daniel Allison is a licensed electrician who can do it all. Daniel E. Electric started back in 2005 and is still going strong, providing service for industrial, residential and commercial needs at all hours of the day and night.

This business is family-run, with Dan's wife Debbie doing "all the book-keeping and paperwork", and recent HHSS graduate Chris Allison as Daniel E. Electric's summer apprentice. This company is a licensed Generac Service Technician, and Dan is licensed to deal with anything electrical up to 750 volts. "There are two licenses now," explained Dan. "There's the one that I have, and on that certifies people just for residential work. Most of us in the trade have the full license."

Priding his company on being service oriented, Dan has a van fully stocked with anything he'll need on the job, as well as connections for use of other materials he may need for his work; he even has use of a bucket truck for work on hydro poles and light changes. A great deal of Dan's business comes from working on generators for stand-by and backup power. Meanwhile, the company also does cabling and data, service upgrades, renovations and installs the electrical necessities in new homes.

"We'll do anything," said Dan. 'Anything' includes 3 a.m. house calls, responding to frantic businesses at all hours, and even packing up boats to service island homes. "If something comes in, you go do it," stated Dan. "Businesses and residences can call at any hour," and the distance they will travel is almost limitless. "Wherever communications can reach us, we'll go there." The company covers all of the Haliburton and Muskoka regions, and will travel greater distances if they get the call.

As a true Haliburton area businessman, Dan will call up another local electrician for help if it will help his service; if there is something that he doesn't have, the other businesses will often help out. In turn, Daniel E. Electric does its best to aid the other electricians too. "Sometimes we'll trade materials to help provide better service," explained Dan.

In addition to trading with local businesses, the company can order in materials which will arrive within 24 hours of the order placement. It is both comforting and impressive that such quick material delivery is available, as it certainly adds to the already outstanding service provided by Daniel E. Electric.

A new feature coming to the business is solar and wind technologies; Dan is just researching the products and information now. "It's an up and coming thing for all of us," he commented. "We'll be selling the equipment and installing the products." Solar and wind technologies are definitely becoming more prominent as energy providers, and will be a benefit to all who partake in this renewable energy technology. Photovoltaic energy, or solar power as it is more commonly called, and wind-generated energy are already becoming more popular as energy demands are increasing drastically and prices for non-renewable energy – especially oil – are climbing.

Clearly a terrific service provider who stays on top of the changing technologies, Daniel E. Electric provides 24 hour service for all of your electrical needs, with the bonus of a friendly, talented and local businessman at the helm. The office can be reached at (705) 286-6866, while Dan and Chris can be reached on the road at (705) 754-5698. For answers to queries, and if you're not wondering when your electricity will come back on, e-mail daniel.electric@sympatico.ca. □

Puccini set this opera in Paris of the 1800's at the height of the invasion of Bohemian artists, from which the title is drawn. The love affair between seamstress Mimi and poet Rodolfo, at the centre of the story, is on the rocks. Life is tough for these young artists and their friends as they try to eke out a living. While attempting a reconciliation, they discover that Mimi is ill. The Highlands Opera Studio presentation of the world famous La Bohème includes participants in this year's Opera Studio program in principal roles and a chorus drawn from the Highlands community. Genealogy Group
- September 8th -

The Haliburton Highlands Genealogy Group meets Wednesday, Sept. 8 in the Common Room of the Minden Hills Cultural Centre. Doors open at 6pm. The 7pm speaker will be Graham Jones on "The Penny Banks of the Beaverton Toy Company".

Graham Jones is a Mechanical Engineer by training who spent his career in research, mainly with the Ministry of Transportation of Ontario. Always fascinated by antiques as a hobby he got into Clock and Penny Bank collecting 25 years ago. After retiring in 1998, he opened an antiques store in Oakville specializing in Clocks and Toys.

One of his particular interests over the years has been in collecting penny banks made in Canada, especially cast iron banks. The literature is very sparse when it comes to Canadian banks but following his research Graham discovered that the Beaverton Toy company of Beaverton Ontario made a number of different toys including cast iron banks. While the Toy Company's history is very short, it was a success and it did leave a legacy of toy banks that today are very collectible.

The Beaverton Toy Company was in business from 1918 to about 1925 when they manufactured toys such as dolls and carriages, and because they were originally a foundry also made cast iron penny banks. The production of the banks was not large but they are distinctive and easily recognized by collectors. In addition, because the production numbers were small the banks are today rare and in some cases very valuable.

Graham now spends his time writing articles and books and giving lectures on clocks and penny banks. His talk on the Beaverton Toy company includes the history of the company, a description of the penny banks and a comparison with American banks of the period, and a display of the different banks.

Graham's talk will include a slide presentation and a display of penny banks. His book on Canadian Banks will be available for sale. Refreshments will be available. There is no charge. Everyone is welcome. For more information contact Gail Leach-Wunker at 286-2225.

FULL and EMPTY

By Marci Mandel

Wow! What a great summer this has been: full of excitement, exploration, and new endeavours. I'm exhausted now, however, from packing so much into such a short period of time.

Back in January when I turned fifty-two, a privilege my father didn't get a chance to enjoy, I decided I wasn't going to let fear stop me from pursuing my dreams. Every day I lived was one more than he had, so I began to treat each as a gift and make the most of life.

For a long time, I'd thought of writing a musical for stage so decided to start small and write something for The Minden Fringe. It was titled: "And the Word Was..." and was about how words can be misinterpreted, misused, and misleading, but if you went deep down through the words to the primal feelings, you'd find truths that were universal. In the piece I explored what the feeling at the base, the platform, of all life was – well, one possibility.

In a moment of paralyzing terror, I panicked about having to perform it as well. Did I really have to do it all alone? Never, so I reached out to Gemini award winning actress, Brigitte Gall, and after reading the script she signed on excited about the sonic element it was rooted in. Wonderful, I just had to polish the script.

Meanwhile, I had several functions to plan for and carry out, including a business dinner for twenty, a family reunion for forty-five, another one for fifteen, a ten day holiday with our grand-daughter, kids' visits, friends' visits, my book group's visit, rehearsals, re-writes, plus work on various committees. So now I'm exhausted: exhausted with a smile on my face.

I first noticed this kind of exhaustion on our holiday. We were awed by the mountains in Banff, entranced by the horses and riders at Spruce Meadows Equestrian Centre, and overwhelmed by the harmonies of the Canadian Tenors. I felt spent by all that beauty which surprised me, because I thought it should have been uplifting. Maybe that's how the saying: "it took my breath away" came to be: like a balloon, we can only take so much before we lose it all.

And then I looked out my window and saw acorns, some on the trees and some on the ground, and realized a similar pattern in nature. I was reminded that it was the juiciest, ripest fruits that fell to the ground, and from there, new stories would soon begin. How perfect it was that the decaying flesh of apples and peaches would fertilize the hidden seeds. It was all so wondrous, so perfectly conceived: out of death came new life.

Funny, we're afraid of death but it's actually happening around us and to us all the time. All the time the wheel of life is turning; all the time it is filling, filling, emptying, emptying; all the time the old gives way to the new; all the time, all the time and it's bittersweet. Life is bittersweet: the joy and the sadness together. Is my cup half empty or half full...or is it both at the same time, the joy and sadness intertwined? Inhale...full, exhale...empty. How do you hold both emotions?

As I looked up at the wall and pondered this question, I saw a poster that said "Make Art Not War" and who knows, maybe that was the answer. We could take sides on issues or we could create space to honour both. Is it good or is it bad? When we mature, that question no longer has relevance because there's no more need for judgement; it's all life! Undereath, there's just one song.

In the East they talk about the three parts of the wheel of life: the rim, the spokes and the hub. If you live on the rim, you get crushed each time the wheel goes around. If you live on a spoke, you get dizzy from all the questioning – should I go up or down, say yes or no. But if you live in the centre, you are unmoved by all the comings and goings. There no longer are highs and lows because nothing is judged, everything is appreciated; the heart is always open. People aren't being 'good' or 'bad', they're just being true to their experiences: "we're all on a path and each place on that path is honourable."

I'm tired. My mind is wandering. Does this make any sense? Perhaps next summer I shall pace myself better. Perhaps next summer I shall sit in the centre with a smile and a full heart opened to and appreciating all that life has to offer. I am the seed and I am the decaying flesh. It's all so bittersweet...and that's okay. That's the song of life.

Wow, what a great summer this has been. What a gift!

The last performance of "And the Word Was..." is Friday, August 27 at 7 pm at the Minden Cultural Centre. Tickets are available by calling 286-3763.

The Wealthy Saver's Fable

Kerry Saver and Johnny Popular went to the same high school. They were in a few of the same classes, but Kerry paid a bit more attention in Business Math: Johnny had a vastly more satisfying social life.

When Kerry graduated, she decided to apply what she had learned about compounding. Starting at the age of 19, she invested $3,000.00 per year, and found an equity fund that ticked along at 8% growth. At the age of 28, after having done $3000.00/year program for nine years, Kerry took a break from saving and left her money to grow.

The very year Kerry stopped saving, Johnny started his own program. He contributed $3000.00 per year in the same equity fund as Kerry. Encouraged by its 8% annual growth, he contributed $3000.00 every year until he was 65.

As luck would have it, Kerry and Johnny's high school held a reunion for the graduating class that had turned 65 years of age. After several glasses of punch, the old acquaintances had run out of stories about their grandchildren and their own physical ailments and turned to discussing their portfolios. Kerry described her strategy of starting at age 19 and stopping at age 28; Johnny was amazed at the coincidence of that year – age 28, marking the year he had started investing. And he was surprised that he outlasted Kerry in his persistence of saving: he had kept his program going for 37 years.

"You're not going to believe this" He said. "The meager $3000.00 a year is now worth $657,948.00" Kerry stared into her glass of punch and reflected on the passage of time. A song that was popular in their graduation year echoed through the bannered gymnasium over the din of conversation. Finally, she spoke. "Johnny, your persistence paid off, and I'm impressed that you've saved so consistently over the last 37 years. But get this: because I started earlier, my $3000.00 a year, for just nine years, is now worth $697752.00. I've got nearly $40,000.00 more than you.

As the two seniors took the stage, having been crowned King and Queen of the reunion, members of the crowd observed that Johnny appeared to have a tear in his eye. They assumed that he was overcome with the mixed emotions of catching up with long-lost friends. But alas, it was the embarrassment and self-loathing he felt at having been bested by a wealthy saver. The moral of the story: never attend a high school reunion. Actually there are two morals. 1) If you can start early, it is worthwhile. 2) If you can't it still pays to save. Johnny's portfolio of $657,948.00 is nothing to sneeze at.

Kerry invested a total of $27,000.00 and Johnny invested a total of $111,000.00

Quick Tips To Lower That Stress Level

Work with Rover

Some long-term care facilities have been doing it for a while, and now many businesses are recognizing the value a well-behaved pet can bring to the work setting. Most people know that stroking a pet can reduce blood pressure, but apparently just having a gentle, good-natured pet in a room can be calming for many people. Even people who don't particularly care for animals have been "won over" by the unconditional love a pet can provide on the job. If you're in a position to enact stress-reducing changes at your place of business, or have the courage to ask, consider spelling relief R-O-V-E-R.

Lange on the Law

Donald Lange

Writs

A "writ" is a legal term describing a document that is issued from the court after a judgment is obtained. The writ is a written command to the sheriff to perform some act involving a person who is subject to the judgment. For example, a successful lawsuit may lead to a judgment for money but it does not lead directly to the payment of the judgment. If the defendant does not voluntarily pay the judgment, the plaintiff must commence enforcement proceedings against the defendant to get the judgment paid. To do this, the plaintiff may issue a writ of seizure and sale. The writ is filed with the sheriff of the county where the defendant resides and empowers the sheriff to enforce the judgment. The plaintiff may direct the sheriff to enforce the judgment by telling the sheriff to attend at the defendant's bank and seize money in the defendant's bank account to satisfy the judgment. When filed in the registry office, the writ also acts as a lien against land owned by the defendant in the county and empowers the sheriff to sell the land when requested by the plaintiff.

If the defendant has defaulted under a mortgage, and power of sale proceedings have commenced by the mortgage company, the power of sale proceedings often ask for a writ of possession. When the writ of possession is filed with the sheriff of the county where the defendant resides and owns property, the writ empowers the sheriff to evict the defendant from his or her home and to take possession of the property on behalf of the mortgage company. The mortgage company may then sell the property and give the purchaser vacant possession, which is a requirement for most residential sales.

Another writ you may come across is a writ of delivery. This writ empowers the sheriff to seize personal property in a person's home and deliver it to the plaintiff. The writ is used, for example, by companies who sell furniture or appliance on a lay-away plan. The company actually owns the furniture or appliance until all payments have been made. If the homeowner defaults on the monthly payments, the company sues, and a judgment is entered against the homeowner. The sheriff may then attend at the home, by virtue of the writ of delivery, to remove the personal property. The writ is often accompanied by an order that the sheriff may use force to enter the home where there is reasonable and probable grounds to believe that the property is inside.

In the next column, I will be talking about the doctrine of unjust enrichment. □

Dumb Criminals

Man's Mullet Does Him In

A tenacious police dog and a telltale mullet haircut left no doubt among sheriff's deputies in Kitsap County, Washington, that a 28-year-old South Kitsap man was the person who walked into a neighbor's home uninvited the morning of June 21.

A 22-year-old resident of Port Orchard dialed 911 just after midnight to report that "a man with a mullet" had entered his home uninvited and refused to leave, according to reports.

The resident told deputies that he had invited some friends over to his new place along the 900 block of Retsil Road East. The man with a mullet, whose name was not released, and his friend walked up to the house with a case of beer and asked if they could party with them.

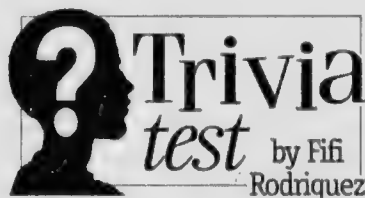

The homeowner said no and the men left on foot. Ten minutes later, the man with the mullet came back and forced his way into the home. He pushed the homeowner aside and went into the living room, trying to mingle with the people inside, reports state. The group of people pushed out the man, who the report alleges was drunk. He returned, saying he was a sheriff's deputy in an attempt to be allowed into the house. The homeowner locked all of his doors and windows to prevent the man from coming inside.

When deputies arrived, they used a police dog to track the man's scent. They found him sitting outside his home along the 2500 block of East Third Street.

The man said that he wanted to say "hi" to his new neighbors, but did not admit to going inside the house. He later said that he went inside, but didn't push anyone. Then he recanted, saying that he never went inside, according to reports. He was arrested on suspicion of burglary and taken to the Kitsap County jail. As of this writing, he's being held on $25,000 bail.

Back To School!

By: Courtney Griffin

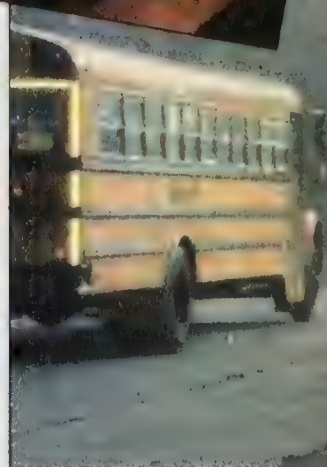

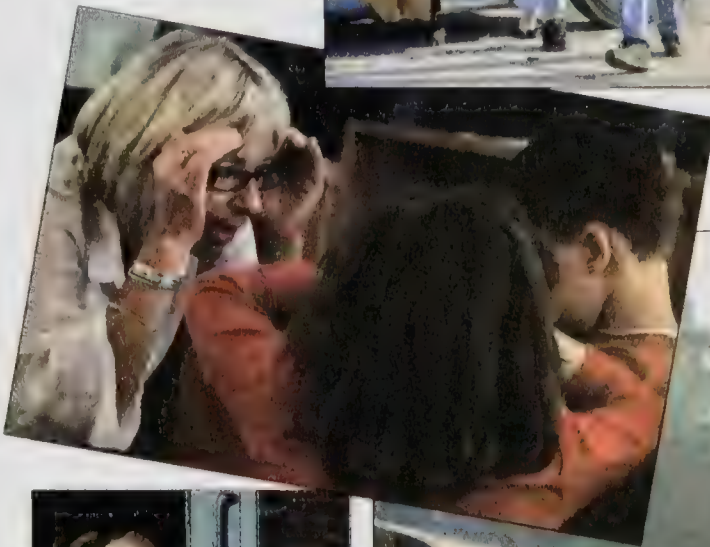

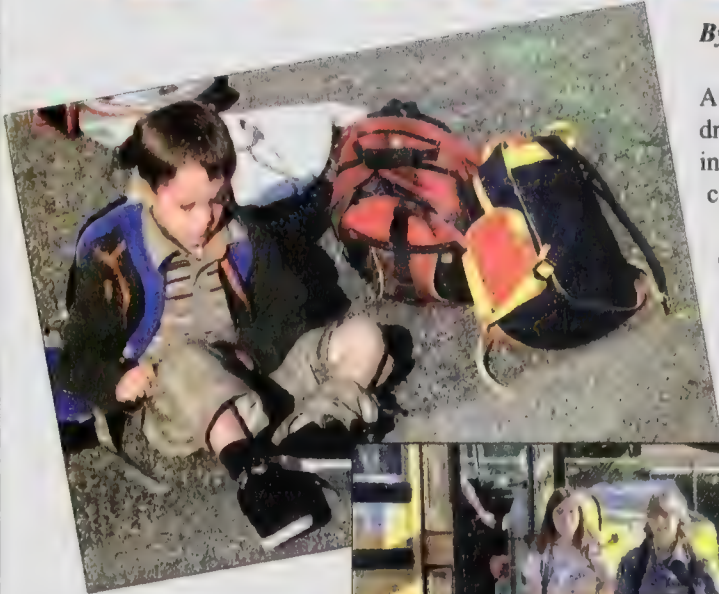

Alright kids, it's time to buckle down. The sunny, lazy days of summer are drawing to a close, and it's time to think about sitting in classrooms painting, practising your math, reading century-old books, and starting your countdown to Christmas break.

Whether you're going into Kindergarten or entering your last year of elementary school, there are some basics that you need to consider for school: don't forget your lunch or you'll be hungry all day, don't sleep late to 'accidentally miss the bus' because you're going to end up in school anyways, and try to think of all the good things about being back at school!

One of the best things about heading back to warm classrooms while the sun taunts you through the windows is that you get to see all your friends again. Remember Suzie's mushroom cut? It finally grew out. And Ben's track pants? Well, he finally got himself some jeans. Sharing all the best stories of summer -- trying to one-up your friends is a given -- isn't just fun, it's a way to reconnect with the kids who lived too far away to have play-dates with every Wednesday...and Friday and Saturday and Monday.

Make sure you have all the utensils you'll need for back to school this year. Depending on your grade, that could be your show-and-tell item, your sketchbook for still-life drawings, or your math kit for those pesky measurements and equations. Don't worry about going back to school -- think of the excitement when next summer rolls around. Be safe everyone!

THE PIPE LINE

With the Labour- day weekend upon us we are reminded to drive with extra caution on the roads by the Highway Patrol, to practice boat safety by the Marine Patrol and to swim with a buddy by the Life Guards. The Fire department issues their warnings for fire safety... smoke and carbon monoxide alarms, rehearse your escape and regrouping strategy ...etc. The check out line at the grocery stores displays a wall of brightly coloured magazine covers that offer great life- saving advice on how to avoid weight gain, bug bites, sunburn ...yadda yadda yadda. That's all well and good but where can one turn for crucial water-closet safety information?

There are more than 40,000 toilet related injuries in the United States annually (Canadian figures are unavailable...o.k ... I didn't check) but still the main stream media fails to print timely articles to alert the public to the danger. People are getting hurt on their toilets somehow and the news channels just turn on the fan and close the door. Oh sure, from time to time they run an article about some popular "Hollywood" type Plumbing subject like "Yearly Valve Greasing" or "Municipal Water Conservation" but information that could really help the average bowel mover is rare indeed.

One of the big box stores even has a commercial claiming that with their help in the low flush toilet movement, the equivalent of 20,000 swimming pools worth of grey water has been saved but that doesn't help me, the "regular" man. Besides, I would rather swim in a nice clean lake thank-you very much.

It's hard to find safety information about the dangers relating to the mighty throne. My friend Al asked me where he could find the answer to his question about public toilets having a split-front seat and domestic toilet seats being solid. Luckily for him, I had been doing some research on that very subject recently. I told him that it has been reported that in the U.K. as many as 250 cases per year are reported of heavy wood or ceramic toilet seats crashing down on young kid's genitals... OUCH!!!! That's all the explanation anyone would need to endorse split seats for public bathrooms... nobody wants that kid sitting behind them for the whole movie, right?

There is one publication that has lead the charge and made the bold step to print vital plumbing fixture hazard information... "The Highland Communicator"!

Congratulations Brett and Joanne, the world is a safer place. If together we've saved just one child's future family, it was worth it.

Have a safe long weekend everyone.

You don't have to live in Georgia to have brown thrashers frequent your backyard. A large, long-tailed songbird, brown thrashers have reddish-brown upperparts with a black streaked breast. Brown thrashers will come to feeding areas to eat seed tossed on the ground.

Strange But True

STRANGE BUT TRUE
By Samantha Weaver

It was 19th-century author Samuel Butler who made the following sage observation: "Morality is the custom of one's country and the current feeling of one's peers. Cannibalism is moral in a cannibal country."

When the city of New York was concerned about leaks in its main water-supply system, it found a novel approach to the problem. Six experienced deep-sea divers were hired to live in a pressurized tank within the water-supply tunnel for a month while they investigated the leaks.

Perhaps unsurprisingly, the Popsicle was invented by an 11-year-old boy.

If you would like to get into modeling and live the glamorous life, you might want to reconsider: Researchers at Dow Jones MarketWatch have found that the average model makes a mere $11 to $12 per hour.

Statistics show that for every person born in the United States, there are 15 puppies and 45 kittens born.

In 1950, the average executive earned about 30 times as much as the average worker. Today's executives earn 300 to 500 times as much.

Evidently wild monkeys are causing a bit of trouble for railroads in India. It seems that the monkeys board trains and run amok, causing no small amount of consternation to the passengers. To combat the problem, police in the city of Delhi hired a black-faced langur monkey to ride the trains and frighten off the wild monkeys. There's no word on what wages were offered.

The most common surnames in the United States are, in order, Smith, Johnson, Williams and Jones.

¥ Those who study such things say that in just one of your fingertips there are approximately 3,000 touch receptors.

Thought for the Day: "A conference is a gathering of important people who singly can do nothing, but together can decide that nothing can be done." -- Fred Allen
